WILLIAM MCKOWN BENEDICT

Born May 20, 1788
Married (1) August 19, 1815, Mary Chaplin, daughter of Dr.
Amasa and Mary (Brigham) Braman, of Millbury, Mass. born January 6, 1797 and died August 31, 1831; married (2) March 20, 1833, Amelia, daughter of Elijah and Elizabeth (Gibbs)
Burbank, and widow of Austin Denny of Worcester, Mass. born November 28, 1800.

He graduated at Union College, Class of 1810, and having chosen the medical profession (in which he afterwards became eminent), he settled in Millbury, Mass., where he married, and died suddenly of disease of the heart, January 17, 1847.

He was a man of most genial disposition, of superior intellect, and like the long line of his ancestry, sustained an exemplary Christian character, and was an active member for many years in the church of Christ.

Rev. Samuel G. Buckingham of Millbury, delivered his funeral sermon; he spoke of his eminence as a physician; of his tenderness and delicacy in the sickroom; of his sympathy when the case was beyond medical skill; he commended Dr.
Benedict as a citizen, reciting his interest in the public weal, his wise administration as a magistrate for many years, and his good counsel in town affairs. He spoke, also, of him as a kind friend, charitable in thought and action, as a Christian of rare piety, and as lovely in all his domestic relations.
