I have noticed that many writers, in describing historic places, are inclined to recount their feelings as they stand on some tower or mountain overlooking the scene, and invariably those feelings assume an authorized form; swelling floods of emotion, and tears of sympathy for the glorious past, and prophetic visions of the brightening future always arise. Whereas, if the truth were really told and the writer were not trying to feel as he thought he ought to under those circumstances, he would find that the swelling floods and tears and visions all came after reaching his own private study in his own native land. Things are not what they seem when one stands amidst the realities.

But aren't we to hear about Jerusalem? Certainly, only when dealing with Oriental subjects it is best to deal in an Oriental manner, and not be too hasty. An Arab has all the time there is, and it isn’t money, either; so no matter if he does waste a little in idle talk.

But Jerusalem,—when shall we begin to describe it? Jerusalem—how the name lingers on one's tongue! It is hard to go right at the modern city and see it as it is. We would rather dream a time over what it has been; as we sit on this hotel balcony, the moonlight giving us glimpses here and there of graceful minarets or rounded domes, we try to picture it to ourselves and realize that it is indeed true. Jerusalem,—can it be that we are in its very midst? Are we indeed where all those great events have taken place? Is this the city of Saracen and the crusades? And in these very streets did Jesus walk? Yes, it is in very truth the place,—Jerusalem, “the place of peace.”

It is well that one arrives late in the afternoon, too late to see the city that day, and can have the first evening to sit on the balcony and dream, while still in ignorance of what is really about him. The second night’s dreams would hardly be so sweet and satisfying. Jerusalem, as it is today, is not noted for gilded palaces or cleanly swept pavements. It is divided into two main portions, the old city and the new city. The former lies within the walls and has a population of about twenty thousand; the latter is north of the old city and of about the same size. Of course it is the old city that attracts one’s attention, though the new is interest ing for a change and for refreshment. The old city is divided into three districts: Jewish, Mohammedan and Christian. It was built originally on the tops and slopes of a number of hills, but the valleys have now become so filled with the debris of successive centuries that they are with difficulty traceable. It has been always a problem to me how cities could become so barred as to be forgotten or to have new ones built above the old. But since visiting an Oriental city it is no longer a mystery: all filth and dirt is thrown into the street until it rapidly fills up; houses are neglected, fall down, and are eventually covered up and in a short time forgotten. And so the rubbish accumulates in such quantities that now, in digging for foundations, workmen often have to go through thirty, forty or even seventy feet of debris before coming to solid rock.

The streets of Jerusalem are narrow, rarely more than eight feet wide, crooked and confused. The houses are all of stone, flat roofed, generally with two stories. There are, of course, some fine buildings, such as the new German church recently dedicated by Emperor William, the church of the Holy Sepulchre, the churches of the different denominations, and especially the Temple Area with its Dome of the Rock and Mosque El-Ak'as. The church of the Holy Sepulchre and the Temple Area are the centres of interest. The former is believed by few, in these days, to be the real place of the crucifixion; but the memories that years of tradition have fixed upon it, and, most of all, the great event it stands for, still render it the centre of love for thousands of pilgrims. Under its great dome one finds the Sepulchre itself; Calvary, and beneath it the tomb of Adam; a Greek chapel containing an urn, and in the urn a large ball, and this urn and ball mark the "centre of the earth." All around the sides of the church are chapels of nearly every denomination containing tombs of saints, pillar of flagellation, Godfrey's sword and spurs and many things of reverence and wonder.

The Temple Area is the best authenticated place in all the city. It is a flat surface of twenty-five or thirty acres, formed by arching up the sides of Mt. Moriah. The rocky summit of this mount appears in the centre and over it is built the Dome of the Rock, sometimes called the Mosque of Omar. This is one of the architectural wonders of the world; its symmetrical proportions, graceful style, beautiful pillars, rare mosaics, and costly tiles all combine to make it a gem of art. The only other building of importance on the Area is the great Mosque El-Ak'as, built as a Crusader church. There are many wonderful legends and amusing superstitions about this place. The Mohammedans hold it very sacred, second only to Mecca, for from the rock in the centre Mohammed ascended and his footprint is pointed out, a print of enormous size, fully two feet long; and we are also shown the place where the angel Gabriel caught the rock and held it down, for it tried to follow Mohammed in his ascent. In another place is a little cupboard and in it a glass vial which contains two or three hairs from the prophet's beard, a most sacred relic.

This Temple Area is a place for Moslems only, but foreign Christians are admitted for a fee; a Jew can never set foot upon it. How pathetic that the Jew's own holy place is of all most forbidden to him. Only in one little court can he approach the old temple wall, and there on Friday afternoons one finds a most touching scene. Old men and women of the Hebrew nation, with their Scriptures in their hands, gather in that narrow place and, with their heads bowed on the great stones worn smooth by the tears and kisses of a hopeless race, they bewail the glories of Israel departed. One cannot but think that those old men and women are sincere, and we wonder how long they will sit "in solitude and mourn," and not lift up their eyes to see the light that is overspreading all the earth.

I wish that I might take you with me to all the places in and about Jerusalem; through the valleys and over the hills; to the leper colony; to the pools and the markets; to Bethlehem and Hebron; to Jericho and Jordan. But these we shall have to leave, and can now only walk across the valley and towards the close of day ascend the slopes of Olivet to take one last look from the place where the Master saw the city. We love the very name of Olivet; we love its trees; we love its slopes; we love its brow; and let us rest a little here and watch the sun sink down below the hills and in the shades of evening, think again of all the stories of this place. Slowly the sun drops down the sky, a few clouds hide his face, but the effulgence of his glory fills earth and sky with golden light, and as the city lies wrapt in radiance one can almost see the New Jerusalem, the holy city, coming down from heaven.

FIRST LEAGUE GAME A VICTORY.

Hobart Defeated Through Witbeck’s Remarkable Work.

The ’Varsity defeated Hobart on the campus last Saturday in a closely contested game by a score of 13 to 9. This was the first league game. Witbeck pitched a brilliant game, which, but for poor support in a critical inning, should have resulted in a victory by a more comfortable margin. Hobart put up a rock bottom fielding game, much superior to that of her opponents; but Folger’s curves were easily solved by the local men.

The contest started in a chilly atmosphere, the unpleasantness of which was greatly increased by a blustering breeze that, had it continued, would have caused many errors and a large score. In the third inning it increased to a fury and as suddenly gave way to a light breeze and sunshine.

The fortunes of the two nine’s varied from the very beginning. Hobart scored an earned run in the first trial at bat, while Union received three goose eggs. In the fourth, however, Witbeck crossed the plate on his own hit, two sacrifices and a short fly by Parker. Bunting started the fun in the following inning by a nice one in short right. Lawton followed with a safe one, Grout struck out, Robinson got to first on Stettenbenz’s fumble, and the bases were full. Witbeck, who was next up, waited for a good ball and smashed it over the round building terrace for a home run. Needless to say, there was a little exuberance of spirit on the benches. In the next inning, after Bunting had scored, forced by a base on balls, the Union pitcher nailed another one over the center fielder for two bases, which brought in three more. Eight Hobart men retired on three strikes up to the end of the fifth, and consequently the others had but small opportunity to run the bases. They managed to tally once in the sixth and then had a little circus in the seventh. Two hits, a base on balls and three wild infield throws resulted in five runs. Hobart then secured two more in the eighth, and brought the score to a tie. Union then did a little base running on her own account. Three hits and a forced hit filled the bases, when the hero of the day stepped to the plate. Sufficient to say, the ball landed in the vicinity of Washburn Hall. The Garnet was four runs to the good.

For the visitors, Blanchard, Folger and Brook played a brilliant fielding game, while Wilcox proved himself a reliable hitter. The work of Witbeck for Union was remarkable. A badly twisted ankle incurred in the first part of the eighth did not render him the less efficient. Griswold was good behind the plate. Grout continued his customary erratic throwing from third. Edwards did rather poorly at second. Bunting was tried at first, but had few reasonable chances. Lawton and he batted well. Parker made one very pretty throw from center to the plate. The summary:

ALBANY MEDICAL COMMENCEMENT.

Twenty-Seven Doctors Receive Their Degrees.

The sixty-ninth commencement of the Albany Medical college took place at Odd Fellows' hall at Albany, Wednesday afternoon, when President A. V. V. Raymond, D. D., LL. D., conferred the degree of M. D. upon a class of twenty-seven. The valedictorian of the class was Dr. George Lenz, of Gloversville, N. Y. The graduates were addressed by Professor James H. Canfield, M. D., LL. D., librarian of Columbia University. The following received the degree of M. D.:

John H. Gutmann, Union '98, received the Bloomer prize for work in pathology and the Powell prize for the best final examination in the second year class. The Townsend prize for the best examination in medicine at the end of the year was awarded to J. C. Merchant, Union '98.

Physicians from all sections of the State attended the twenty-seventh annual meeting of the Alumni association of the Albany Medical college, which was held at Alumni hall. J. M. Mosher, college '86, medical '89, was elected recording secretary and Andrew Mac-

Farlane, college '84, medical '87, was chosen corresponding secretary.

The twenty-seventh annual dinner of the Alumni association took place in the banquet hall of the Ten Eyck Wednesday evening, Dr. Albert Vander Veer, acting as toastmaster. Among the speakers were J. Newton Fiero, college '67, and Amasa J. Parker, '63.

IMPORTANT LIBRARY ADDITION.

Gift of 2500 Volumes From the Late Henry J. Cullen, '60.

The two alcoves in the northeast corner of the library and two sections of a third alcove are now devoted to the books of the late Hon. Henry James Cullen, '60, which were given to the college last week by Mrs. Cullen in accordance with her husband's wishes.

The collection, which numbers about 2500 volumes, will prove a valuable addition to the library, as it includes many rare and highly prized works. It consists almost entirely of historical and other prose literature, Byron and Shakespeare being the only poets represented, and Darwin's "Origin of Species," and "Descent of Man," the only scientific works. The collection is especially strong in New York State history, there being 121 volumes of information concerning the counties and principal cities of the State. It includes also a fine assortment of works on general American history, particularly that of the Southern States and the Revolutionary period. There are many biographies, among which are several of Jackson and Jefferson, showing that Judge Cullen took an especial interest in these characters.

English history is well represented by sets of such works as Hume, Smollett, Hughes, and 14 volumes of Lingard. There is also Burton's "History of Scotland" in seven volumes. Another special feature of the library is the number of works relating to criminology; Burke's "Celebrated Trials," four volumes of the "Newgate Calendar," and many others. A few more of the most noteworthy sets are the "Gallerie du Palais Pitti;" 19 volumes of Jonathan Swift's works; 32 volumes of Cooper; 34 volumes of Voltaire; Froissart's "Chronicles;" 22 volume's of De Foé; Holme's writings in 14 volumes; "The Narrative and Critical History of the United States; Edition de Duxe in eight volumes; two volumes of the "Letters of Junius," and Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy."

Together with five other fellow members of this year's graduating class of the medical department, he recently tried the competitive examination for the position and handed in the most creditable paper.

The annual spring track subscription was taken at the college meeting Monday morning. In all, something over $250 was pledged. Those present at the meeting promised to pay $192 in personal subscriptions and, in addition, every student not in attendance was assessed $1. Professor Pollard acted as "auctioneer."

At a meeting of the class baseball managers held last week, it was agreed to place entire charge of arranging dates for the class games in the hands of the "varsity manager. Mr. Tuggey has accordingly set the following dates, which only can be changed with his consent. Any nine failing to appear at the appointed time will forfeit the game. The schedule is as follows:

UNION'S ATHLETES will meet the 36th and 37th Separate Companies on the college oval on Saturday afternoon in a return contest. Every man on the team should not only turn out every day that remains but obey strictly the new training rules. Coach Weaver is doing his best to turn out a finished product, and the team is improving rapidly under his guidance. The soldiers won the former meet by a very narrow margin, and it is to be hoped that close application to business on the part of the team, and hearty support from the student body will enable the boys in garnet to turn the tables and score a double defeat. The meet will at least accomplish one excellent result—the men will have had some actual experience in fighting for the lead when they arrive at Geneva on Decoration Day.

THE CONCORDIENSIS takes pleasure in presenting to its readers in this issue brief but comprehensive information regarding the class of 1860, which will celebrate the fortieth anniversary of its graduation next June. Of all of the classes which Old Union has sent forth, none, perhaps, has included more prominent and loyal alumni than '60. In spite of the unusually large size of the class, the editors have succeeded in obtaining information concerning every man, and a copy of this issue is sent to every living member. In behalf of the undergraduates we take pleasure in extending to all '60 men a cordial invitation to revisit the old college and participate in the festivities of commencement week. In our next issue we hope to be able to present a resume of the alumni of '70 and '75, and to that end request information concerning members of those classes.

INTERCOLLEGIATE.

The University of Chicago has closed a contract with the University of Pennsylvania under which the Quakers will play a return football game in 1901. The Maroons will meet the Pennsylvania eleven this year on October 27 at Philadelphia.
