The Campaign at Withlacooche, ^{River} Fla., occurred Dec. 28, 31, 1835; Feb. 27 to March 5, 31, April 13 to May 3, Oct. 13
and Nov. 17, 1836.

The death of Gen. Robert T. Lytle, of Cincinnati, Ohio, was several days ago announced in the New Orleans papers as having lately taken place at the Verandah Hotel. We had hoped that this was an error, originating in some way in the fact of the recent death of his brother in the city of New York, Major J.S. Lytle, Paymaster in the Army. The news, however, is confirmed, upon private advices, in the Cincinnati papers. He died on the 21st ultimo. When arrested in New Orleans by the disease which terminated his life, he was on his way to seek a new home in Texas. Gen. Lytle served one term in Congress some years ago, and subsequently held an office under the General Government. He was thus very generally known, and was, we believe, very generally regarded as a man of liberal character and high-toned sentiment.
