BENJAMIN T. TIBBITTS

Died April 16, 1859, aged 62.

We record another of those melancholy visitations, which have, with dreadful frequency, clouded the atmosphere of our city, and shrouded a wide circle of families in mourning.

Benjamin Tibbitts was born April, 14, 1798, in Troy, the year that village was incorporated as a town. His father, and his uncle George Tibbitts, were from Newport, Rhode Island, men of wealth and enterprise, founders of that now prosperous city, and whose public spirit and wise counsels were efficient elements in its development, and whose names have become historical in its annals.

Mr. Tibbitts was educated at Union College, and after graduating, studied law with Thomas B. Gold, of Whitesboro, then the prominent lawyer in Central New York. He afterwards travelled in Europe, where he resided many years, and on his return lived in New York, his ample fortune dispensing with the necessity of pursuing his profession, and devoting his leisure to the social life for which his disposition and accomplishments eminently fitted him. He married a daughter of John R. Bleecker, a niece of Mrs. Dudley, of this city, and from that time has resided there, respected and beloved by the circle of friends in which he moved. --- Argus.
