DIED: On Monday of last week, at the residence of his brother in Oppenheim, whither he had gone on a visit, and after a short and severe illness, Edward Yates, Esq., of this city, in the 31st year of his age.

It is seldom that we are called upon to record the exit of one, where the feelings and sympathy of those acquainted with him were so deeply interested, as in the instance of Mr. Yates. The estimable qualities of his heart had won him the affection and esteem of all his acquaintances. The nobleness and liberality of his disposition, indeed, were proverbial. Possessing an uncommon share of generosity and sensibility, he was ever the friend of the poor and unfortunate. The cry of distress or the voice of want never passed him unheeded. This kindness of his nature was equalled only by his candor, and the uprightness of his private life. As a man or a citizen, his integrity was unquestioned, and as a friend he was warm and sincere. He had formerly been elected to a seat in the Common Council of this city, and had also received various marks of the confidence of his fellow-citizens in his capacity and integrity, and of their esteem for his private character.

He has left behind him a widow with one child, who, together with those friends who esteemed him for the qualities of his heart, as well as the needy whom his generosity relieved, will long mourn his early departure.

His funeral took place in this city on Wednesday last, and was attended by a large concourse of his friends and acquaintances. The Board of Directors of the Mohawk Bank, of which at the time of his death he was a member, also, in pursuance of a resolution of the Board, attended the funeral. They likewise resolved to wear crape on the left arm, for thirty days, as a token of respect for the deceased.

Schenectady Whig
Sept. 24, 1833 (Tuesday)

DIED: In New York, on the 4th inst, Catharine, youngest daughter of Edward Yates, Esq., of this city.

Schenectady Whig
April 9, 1833.
1819 Edward Yates—see folder of Henry C. Yates in 1818, who was his brother.

CLASS OF 1819

EDWARD YATES

Son of Henry and Catharine (Mynderse) Yates
Born October 21, 1801
Died in 1833.

Early History of Schenectady p. 52
John Sanders 1879.